1. Go to BLOGGER.COM
2. Click CREATE YOUR BLOG NOW

3. Sign up, BUT be sure to make your username something that a stranger will not be able to follow back to you.
For example: for me, using “davisbg” would be a bad idea because it has my initials. However using something like “e142teacher” would be good because there is neither a gender nor a name attached to it.

RULES: (For your protection)

- 1) Don't use your name in the username (not even your initials)
- 2) Do not use something gender specific
- 3) Nothing associated with the school can appear on your blog
- 4) You cannot post your email address on your blog
- 5) You cannot post your real name on your blog

Allow your blog to be public so I can add you to my RSS feed (so my computer notifies me when you complete an assignment)

I give permission for my son/daughter to create an anonymous blog on which they will respond to course material/assignments.

I also acknowledge that when following the rules above, a blog can serve as great learning tool when used properly.

Lastly, I know that it is my responsibility (as parent/guardian) to monitor my student's web use to make sure that they are not doing something that may endanger them.
